

Marshall, Jack

In 1965 the Forests Department introduced a new safety program. From 1965, all officers and overseers were given formal safety training. Jack Marshall was seconded from fire control duties, given 10 weeks training by the National Safety Council and became the first Departmental Safety Officer, responsible for training and field promotion of safety. Promoted to Senior Forester (Fire Control) 31.12.1965. Retired 1977. In later years Arthur Kesners and Tom Woods had similar responsibilities.
